

Panel: Objects of knowledge and belief: sentences vs. propositions?

Panel Chairman: Robert C. Stalnaker, Cornell University

Panelists: Hans Kamp, University of Texas, Austin

Kurt Konolige, SRI International

Hector J. Levesque, University of Toronto

Richmond H. Thomason, University of Pittsburgh

Abstract: It has been an object of much controversy in the literature whether knowledge should be taken to be a relation between agents and sentences (the syntactic or sentential approach) or a relation between agents and propositions (the semantic or propositional attitude approach). In this panel, we discuss the relative merits of the two approaches.